THE WAY WE ALL REGISTER TO VOTE IS CHANGING

MAE'R FFORDD YR YDYM YN COFRESTRU I BLEIDLEISIO YN NEWID

You need to make sure that you're on the updated register, or you might not be able to vote in future.

YOUR VOTE MATTERS
MAKE SURE YOU'RE IN

YOU NEED TO BE REGISTERED IN ORDER TO VOTE.

HOW DO I REGISTER?

Registering to vote is straightforward.

1. Go to www.gov.uk/register-to-vote
2. Fill in your name, address, date of birth and a few other details. You'll also need your National Insurance number, which can be found on your National Insurance card, or in official paperwork such as payslips, or letters about benefits or tax credits.
3. Look out for confirmation from your local electoral registration staff to say you're registered.

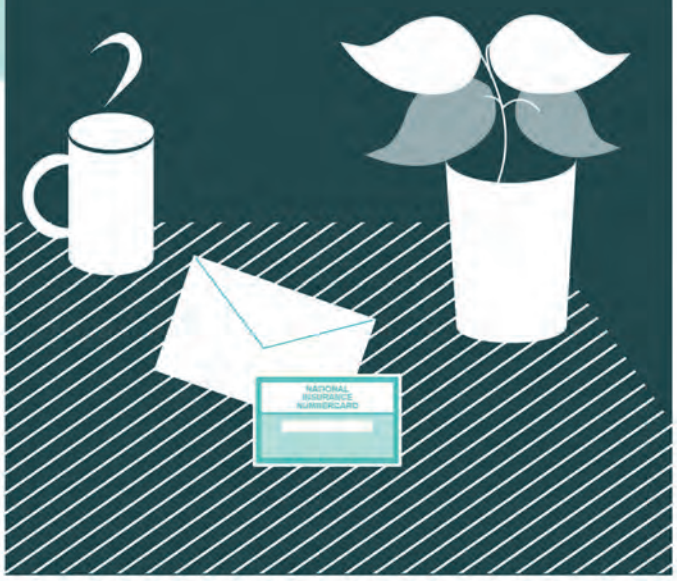
If you don't have access to the internet or can't use it, your local electoral registration staff will be able to help you to register.

ABOUT VOTER REGISTRATION

You need to register in order to be able to vote in elections and referendums. The way you register to vote has changed in 2014.

The new system means:

- You can now register online.
- Everyone has become responsible for registering themselves. Under the old system the 'head of every household' could register everyone who lived at their address.
- You need to provide a few more details to register – including your National Insurance number and date of birth. This is to make the electoral register more secure.



WHY SHOULD I REGISTER?

To vote: You need to register in order to be able to vote. If you aren't registered to vote, you won't have the chance to have a say on who represents you.

Some people also register to vote because they want to apply for credit. This is because credit reference agencies use the register to confirm where someone lives when they apply for credit in order to counteract fraud.

BUT I THOUGHT I WAS ALREADY REGISTERED TO VOTE?

If you have registered yourself at your current address since 10 June 2014 in England and Wales or 19 September 2014 in Scotland – and you have not moved home since – you will be registered to vote under the new system.

You will also be registered to vote if you received information at your current address telling you that you are registered under the new system. If you are unsure whether you are registered under the new system, contact your local electoral registration staff.

WHAT IF I DON'T REGISTER?

Not only will you not have a say at future elections and referendums, but if you don't respond to requests for information from your local electoral registration staff offices you could be at risk of getting fined £80.

The registration system has changed and even if you were registered in the past you may need to register again now.

CARDIFF PREMIERE FOR DOCTOR WHO: The much-anticipated new series of Doctor Who will have its world premiere at St David's Hall on August 7.

Marking the start of the BBC One hit sci-fi drama's spectacular world tour, the premiere will be fans' first chance to see Peter Capaldi as the Twelfth Doctor alongside Jenna Coleman as on-screen companion Clara in episode one of the new series.

Walking tours of Doctor Who filming locations in Cardiff will take place every Friday, Saturday and Sunday throughout August. Tickets are included with general admission to the Doctor Who Experience in Cardiff Bay.

Challenging budget ahead

THE City of Cardiff Council will again have to make tens of millions of pounds of savings to balance its books in the next financial year.

The Council faces the challenge of finding budget savings of up to £45.4m next year. This is the result of escalating cost pressures coupled with warnings from the Welsh Government that councils will need to consider funding cuts of 4.5 per cent in the next financial year and that the situation isn't going to improve soon.

In Cardiff, this could equate to a budget gap of £124m over the next three years, on top of savings of more than £48m identified in the last budget round.

Cabinet Member for Corporate Services and Performance, Councillor Graham Hinchey, said: "We have to face up to the reality that the financial position for Cardiff as with every other Council in Wales continues to be bleak.

"It is clear that we need to do things differently and have to continue to make difficult choices to protect our key priorities but Cardiff also faces a unique situation which is not being taken into consideration when budgets are set. Cardiff is a major economic driver for the capital region and there needs to be recognition of how much we contribute to the Welsh economy in terms of creating jobs and opportunities which is what happens with the core cities in England."

The Council will maintain its key aims of making a better future for Cardiff by creating jobs and opportunities for all, prioritising education, helping those that need it most and putting the co-operative Council agenda at the heart of everything we do. However the scale of the financial challenge means that reductions in service delivery are inevitable and the Council will need to go through a sustained period of radical change including consideration of various different service delivery options, to ensure the budget shortfall is met.

City of Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Phil Bale, added: "Obviously the measures we will need to put in place will be far reaching and we can't ignore the fact that they will impact on both staff and services but we will be doing all we can to minimise those effects.

"It is crucial, therefore, that we continue to engage with people about how the changes as a result of the budget situation will impact on them.

"We have already started the Cardiff Debate which is a public conversation around the budget and how we deliver services to better understand what people want and need in the future. It is only by working with our communities that we can tackle these challenges."

A day in a life

The latest in a regular series looking at jobs carried out by employees of the City Council and its partners. This month, Service Manager for hospital social work services, Jackie Burns, talks to Capital Times.

"I can tell what sort of day it's going to be by how busy it is in A&E at the University Hospital of Wales. As I drive into work, if the Emergency Unit looks busy, this means that the pressure is on at the 'front end' of the hospital. I am responsible for ensuring the smooth running of the 'back end'.

The City of Cardiff Council has two hospital social work teams – one at UHW, the other at Llandough Hospital – we support patients and their families who need additional support to go home and to help ensure they experience a safe and timely discharge from hospital.

We work alongside our health colleagues from the wards - nurses, doctors, occupational therapists and physiotherapists. Working as part of these multi–disciplinary teams has always been vital in delivering the best outcome for patients and in some ways we've been the pioneers of partnership working.

Working in partnership with Health is a key element in providing quality social care to people not only through their hospital stay, but also once home in their own communities, where we can hand back to our community-based colleagues – social workers and district nurses.

The value of joint working has been recognised with the setting up of the Integrated Discharge Service (IDS) in both hospitals. The hospital social work teams (including Vale of Glamorgan Council staff) have joined forces with the Discharge Liaison Nurses to create one integrated service based in one office. The single point of contact makes it easier for the wards to exchange information, avoiding duplication and improving communication.

Referrals come to the Discharge Service directly from the wards. We check the information and monitor the patient's progress until they are ready to start planning for their discharge. This can take as little as 48 hours or as long as 48 days, depending on the person's recovery and rehabilitation. We are prepared to respond to a whole variety of needs - my job is to make sure that the social care service is flexible and responsive enough to meet these differing demands.

With 21 wards and 1,000 beds, it's a busy hospital and good patient flow is crucial in enabling healthcare and ultimately social care to be provided to those that need it. This means we have to be quick to identify patients who can be discharged. We have daily meetings with the Discharge Liaison Manager to monitor those who are on the 'medically fit' list and discuss any potential problems which may delay discharge. Since the implementation of the integrated discharge service, social workers make sure we record all relevant information which is particularly important so that all professionals working with a patient have up to date information on the status of discharge planning arrangements.

'This job is not boring!' is what I tell staff when the challenge of working here feels overwhelming but importantly we value the privilege of being invited into people's personal lives especially as this is when they're most vulnerable. We have the opportunity to make a difference to people's lives and that can be very rewarding , as is the feeling of satisfaction when I leave the office at the end of the day and all is calm at the front end.

Get involved in the Cardiff Debate!

THE Cardiff Debate, the programme of events, workshops and discussions on how the City of Cardiff Council, its partners and local people can work together to meet the challenges of significantly reduced budgets and growing demand for services continues apace over the summer with more 'on-street' engagement exercises around the city as well as neighbourhood 'drop-in' sessions where staff will be on hand to hear and discuss people's views.

Participants will be given the opportunity to let the Cardiff Debate team know about which services they use and ideas on how they may be delivered differently in the future.

City of Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Phil Bale, "It was very encouraging to see so many people getting involved in the first Cardiff Debate events in June. We heard from a wide range of people, many of whom feel very passionately about public services in the city, and it's been very useful to hear their ideas on how services can be delivered in the future to ensure they are sustainable and meeting the needs of our communities.

"This is just the start of a process so residents, partners, voluntary and community groups will have more opportunities to get involved, make their views known and give us ideas for new approaches to meeting local needs."

Breathing new life into the city centre

A route map to deliver a new bus interchange for Cardiff and regenerate the Central Square has been agreed by the City Council's Cabinet.

Last month BBC Cymru Wales announced they would be relocating their headquarters to a landmark Norman Foster and Partners building in Central Square, forming the centre-piece of a ¾ of a million square feet mixed use development being taken forward by developer Rightacres and the Council.

The redevelopment is a key priority of the Council and includes the delivery of a new bus interchange as well as new high quality public relm arounf the railway station.

The Cabinet recently approved plans to secure the freehold ownership of the Wood Street NCP car park to complete the comprehensive freehold ownership of the Central Square regeneration area to help kick start this exciting scheme.

The development will give the Council an opportunity to redesign the capital's bus interchange, creating an inspirational new gateway for Cardiff.

City of Cardiff Council Leader, Councillor Phil Bale, said: "The decision by BBC Cymru Wales to relocate to the city centre is a massive vote of confidence and the next step in our ambitious regeneration plan.

"It will result in the building of a major headquarters building designed by a world renowned architect right in the heart of the city centre as well as the creation of other high grade office accommodation. It also means we can redesign our welcome to the world, of which the city can be justly proud.

"This is a huge development and we are committed to ensuring that we will engage with the public throughout on the beneficial changes this will create to ensure we are creating the best developments for Cardiff now and into the future."

BBC Cymru Wales plan to relocate in 2018 so the current bus station needs to close in summer 2015 for the development to begin.

Two potential sites for the bus interchange have been identified - Marland House/ NCP Car Park site (north of the railway line) and Network Rail Car Park site (south of the railway line). Both sites have immediate proximity to Cardiff Central Railway Station and offer the potential to keep the bus interchange open on major event days and for weekend night services by providing access from areas that will not be subject to road closures.

A major public engagement exercise will be undertaken both in terms of the relocation and design of the new bus interchange and also the interim bus transport arrangements needed.

In anticipation of these changes, the Council has already carried out bus infrastructure improvements to increase on-street capacity including works at Westgate Street, Custom House Street and Churchill Way. Further opportunities for temporary capacity increases are also available in Wood Street, Lower St Mary Street and potentially Callaghan Square.

The improvements mean that the majority of Cardiff Bus services will be able to maintain their existing routes, either circling the city centre in an anti-clockwise direction or looping in Mill Lane / Custom House Street to exit the city centre via Westgate Street.

Cabinet Member for Transport, Planning and Sustainability, Councillor Ramesh Patel, said: "The city already has extensive experience of operating with the closure of the bus station as currently it needs to close during major events. With the work which has already been undertaken to improve the infrastructure elsewhere in the city centre we are confident the city can cope with the closure of the bus station while the new interchange is being constructed.

"We appreciate this is going to cause concern for people which is why we will be undertaking a major engagment exercise and keeping operators and bus users informed throughout about the changes. We also want to assure people that it is a matter of priority interim arrangements for bus operations will be in place before the current station is closed."

Bilingual Cardiff

I recently attended the successful Tafwyl festival in Cardiff Castle.

Bringing partners together is central to being a Co-operative Council and Tafwyl is a fine example of partnership working with the Council as hosts, partners like the Welsh Government and Cardiff University providing funding and Menter Caerdydd organising such a memorable event.

This approach was also behind the 'Bilingual Cardiff' conference earlier this year when over 40 organisations attended to consider how Welsh could be better promoted in the city. One idea was for a Welsh language space so I was delighted to announce at Tafwyl that we would explore the potential for a new 'Welsh Language Space' in the heart of our capital.

We are an increasingly bilingual city with a rise in both the number and percentage of Welsh speakers in the 2011 census while well over a quarter of children and young people aged five to 15 are now fluent Welsh speakers. We should be actively promoting the language rather than simply meeting our statutory requirements. We have already rebranded our Welsh Language Unit as 'Bilingual Cardiff' to take on more of an advisory role for other organisations whilst continuing to promote awareness of Welsh across the city.

School meal payments go hi- tech

THE City Council's cashless payment method for school meals has reached another important milestone as Willows High School becomes the latest to introduce the innovative biometric system.

Pupils at the school have been leaving their wallets at home and taking advantage of the convenience of using their fingers to make their school meal and snack payments.

Instead of having to use cash to pay for school meals, pupils press a small scanner at the tills which recognises them and connects to their personal account. As well as making the catering system faster and more efficient for pupils and schools, access to free school meals is improved as all pupils are treated the same when it comes to paying.

Four more schools are set to introduce the biometric payment system in the autumn, with the aim of rolling it out to all secondary schools over the next 12 months. The idea of introducing the system in primary schools is currently being discussed. To find out more about school meals, visit www.cardiff.gov.uk/schoolcatering

Is it time to apply for your child's school place?

THE first day at school is a key milestone in all children's lives, and the city of Cardiff Council is reminding parents of children in Cardiff who are due to start primary school in September 2015 of the importance of registering their preferred school options.

Parents of children born between September 1 2010 and August 31 2011 who have already provided the City Council with their child's details will be sent preference forms in October to enable them to submit their preferences for schools. But if the Council doesn't have their details, parents need to contact the Admissions Team by September 5 to receive information on the application process.

There are three easy ways to make sure you receive a preference form. You can visit www.cardiff.gov.uk/schooladmissions to provide your child's details, call the Admissions Team on 029 2087 2909 or email your child's name, address and date of birth to admissions@cardiff.gov.uk

The deadline for applying for school places is Monday December 1, 2014 for secondary education and Monday, January 12, 2015 for primary education.

Cabinet Member for Education and Skills, Councillor Julia Magill, said: "There are strict deadlines in place for applications so parents must ensure that the Council receives their preferences in time. Every year we have parents who are very disappointed that they cannot get their children into the schools they would prefer because they have missed the deadline for expressing preferences and all the places are taken by the time they apply."

Parents with children going into secondary education in September 2015 will receive information on the application process in the Autumn Term, so there is no need for them to get in touch with the Admissions Team as it will already have your child's details. For children not attending a Cardiff Community Primary or Church School parents will need to provide their child's details.

£2m Greener Grangetown investment

THE innovative 'Greener Grangetown' scheme, aimed at better managing rainwater in the community, reached an important landmark last month when partners Dŵr Cymru Welsh Water (DCWW), the City of Cardiff Council and Natural Resources Wales (NRW) launched a public consultation programme to hear the views of the local community.

The partners are now investing £2 million in the first phase of Greener Grangetown which will begin construction in spring 2015. Using the latest techniques, Greener Grangetown will catch, clean and divert rainwater directly into the River Taff instead of pumping it over six miles through the Vale of Glamorgan to the sea. The innovative surface water management techniques will include installing attractive planted areas that will help to absorb the water, increase biodiversity whilst providing the community with more green spaces on their streets.

Both phases of the scheme are anticipated to remove around 155,000m², the equivalent surface area of about 40 football pitches, of surface water from the combined waste water network, which deals with waste water and rainwater. This will significantly reduce the carbon footprint and costs associated with pumping the water through the existing network, helping to make the area a cleaner, greener place to live.

The local community had the opportunity to have their say in the design process by attending consultation events in Grangetown during June and July.

Cabinet Member for Traffic, Transportation and Sustainability, Councillor Ramesh Patel, said: "We are ensuring the needs of the local community are central to this important scheme as in addition to pioneering technology being used in the treatment of rainwater, there will be significant improvements to the look and feel of the area."

Chris Jones, Chief Executive of Dŵr Cymru Welsh Waste, said: "The delivery of Greener Grangetown is a sustainable system that will significantly improve the way our network operates which will bring clear environmental benefits. We are proud to be involved in a partnership project that is the first of its kind anywhere in the UK and it reflects our goals to reduce our impact on the environment."

Gareth O'Shea from Natural Resources Wales said: "The Greener Grangetown project will not only have environmental benefits but also provide residents with more opportunities to enjoy green spaces."

The NATO Summit is coming

THIS September, over 60 world leaders will be coming to Wales to attend the NATO Summit at the Celtic Manor Resort in Newport.

A series of associated events will also take place in Cardiff. This is a great opportunity for Wales with the focus of the worlds' media on our country.

In preparation for the Summit, Gwent and South Wales Police are planning ahead to ensure the event is safe and that any potential disruption to you is minimised.

This will be one of the largest security operations ever undertaken in the UK with extra officers and staff from all over the country arriving in the area to help police the event.

How could this affect you?

Normal policing will be maintained and neighbourhood officers will continue their daily duties, patrolling the area protecting and reassuring our communities. You can expect to see more police officers and activity in your area providing security for the Summit.

Security around the Summit will rely on the safe transportation and accommodation of the guests. This will inevitably impact upon traffic and pedestrian flow around the areas being used for the Summit. It is anticipated that any impact will be potentially focused around the Celtic Manor Resort in Newport, Cardiff city centre and the roads in between, particularly the M4.

The peak disruption is likely to occur on the M4 between the Severn Bridge and Cardiff (in both directions) on the late afternoon and evening of Thursday, September 4. Motorists should aim to avoid this route completely if at all possible, especially for local journeys around Newport during this time, as we expect there may still be unavoidable congestion.

The Police are working hard to ensure any disruption to local services and impact on local communities and businesses will be minimised. If you have any concerns, talk to your local Officer or call 101 for non-emergencies. In the event of an emergency, always call 999. For more information visit www.gwent.police.uk

Support for Social Enterprises

A new fund to boost the development of social enterprises in the city is to be set up.

The annual social innovation fund of £70,000 will be established to provide start up funding towards capital costs for Small or Medium Enterprises (SMEs).

In addition to financial assistance from the City Council, the fund will also offer social enterprises advice and support from a range of partners including the Wales Co-operative Centre and Charity Bank.

A social enterprise is a business with primarily social objectives and profit is mostly reinvested in the business or in the community. They compete in the marketplace and need to be well run to make money and achieve their social aims. They can vary from small community owned village shops to large organisations delivering public services and good examples in Cardiff include Cardiff and Vale Credit Union and the Riverside Farmers' Markets.

Leader of the City Council, Councillor Phil Bale, said: "Social enterprises require a range of support and we know that it can be difficult for many new social enterprises to get backing for initial costs. The new fund seeks to kick start the development of new social enterprises, ensuring they have access to the guidance and assistance they need to develop into sustainable businesses and contribute to our society.

"We hope the fund can help social entrepreneurs in the city to develop ideas that can support the administration's four key priorities which are improving education and skills to ensure people of all ages fulfil their potential, supporting the vulnerable in our communities, promoting economic development to bring in investment and jobs to the city and putting the co-operative agenda at the heart of the authority's work."

Cabinet Member for Community Development, Co-operatives and Social Enterprise, Councillor Peter Bradbury said: "The City of Cardiff Council is committed to increasing the number of social enterprises in the city and the creation of this new social innovation fund to assist start-ups would make a significant contribution to the local economy, both in terms of direct economic contribution, job creation and supporting community development.

As part of the new scheme, applicants would also have access to advice and support from the Wales Co-operative Centre, signposting to funding to support ongoing activities and promotion of crowdfunding activities to support community activities.

Decisions on funding would be made by a local board comprising of representatives from the City Council, Cardiff Business Council, Wales Co-operative Centre and others.

Crowdfunding for better communities

CROWDFUNDING is the raising of funding, usually on the internet, from suppporters, or 'the crowd', to fund a scheme or project.

It is usually when a large number of people come together, each contributing small amounts towards a project, whether it be big or small.

An idea, scheme or initiative is proposed and a crowd of people then add their support to the proposal.

There are various web-based crowdfunding platforms around but Spacehive is the world's first funding platform for civic projects.

The website enables people, companies and councils to fund schemes that make communities better places to live like new children's playgrounds or enhanced park areas in an easy way.

Do you have an idea that would help make your community a more attractive or safe place to live and work?

CYD CYMRU WALES TOGETHER ENERGY COLLECTIVE CYDWEITHFA YNNI

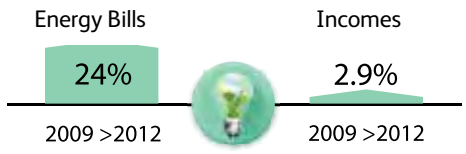
SUPPORTED by the Welsh Government, "Cyd Cymru / Wales Together" is Wales' collective switching scheme, led by the City of Cardiff Council and Vale of Glamorgan Council to help people save money on their energy bills.

We know that the price of energy has been going up over recent years. According to Ofgem and ONS figures, energy bills rose by as much as 24 per cent between 2009 and 2012 whilst household incomes only rose by 2.9 per cent over the same period.



Because this is a trend that is likely to continue it means that the most vulnerable people in society are likely to be the worst affected.

The idea behind collective energy switching is similar to bulk-buying products in order to get a better price. With a collective switch, those interested in receiving a better deal group together as a 'collective' before approaching the energy suppliers. The larger the number of people that get involved, the more attractive the group of customers are likely to be to the energy suppliers.

The scheme saved an average of £170 per household for customers, promoted energy saving advice and encouraged participants to become more confident when it came to switching energy suppliers to get a better deal.

Families First

'FAMILIES First' is a Welsh Government-funded programme to promote effective multi-agency support for children, young people and families. It is a £29m programme to support the families in greatest need and exemplifies what a co-operative approach is about.

One of the main aims of Families First is to provide timely help for families when they start to experience difficulty, to prevent problems from escalating. It also aims to work with families who need extra support to increase their confidence to return to work and improve their family income.

The programme was co-produced with a range of partners, providers and perhaps, most importantly young people, parents and grandparents.

The commissioning of Families First services in 2012 involved children and young people as the Council and Barnardo's recruited a group of 'Young commissioners', aged eight to 21, to facilitate children and young people's involvement in the commissioning and procurement of the services to ensure that they were relevant, appropriate and likely to be used.

Families First has also been designed to recognise the specific needs of different families and the requirement for multiple agencies to provide joined-up packages of support.

The programme sits alongside Communities First and Flying Start as key elements in the Welsh Government's strategy for tackling poverty. In Cardiff, these programmes are brought together to make the most effective use of funding to meet local needs and form an important element in the work of Neighbourhood Partnerships.

During the last year, the programme provided a range of services from information and advice to intensive support for over 18,000 people in the city.

For more information on Families First, visit www.cardiffpartnership.co.uk or Freephone 0808 800 0038.

Working together to meet the needs of our communities

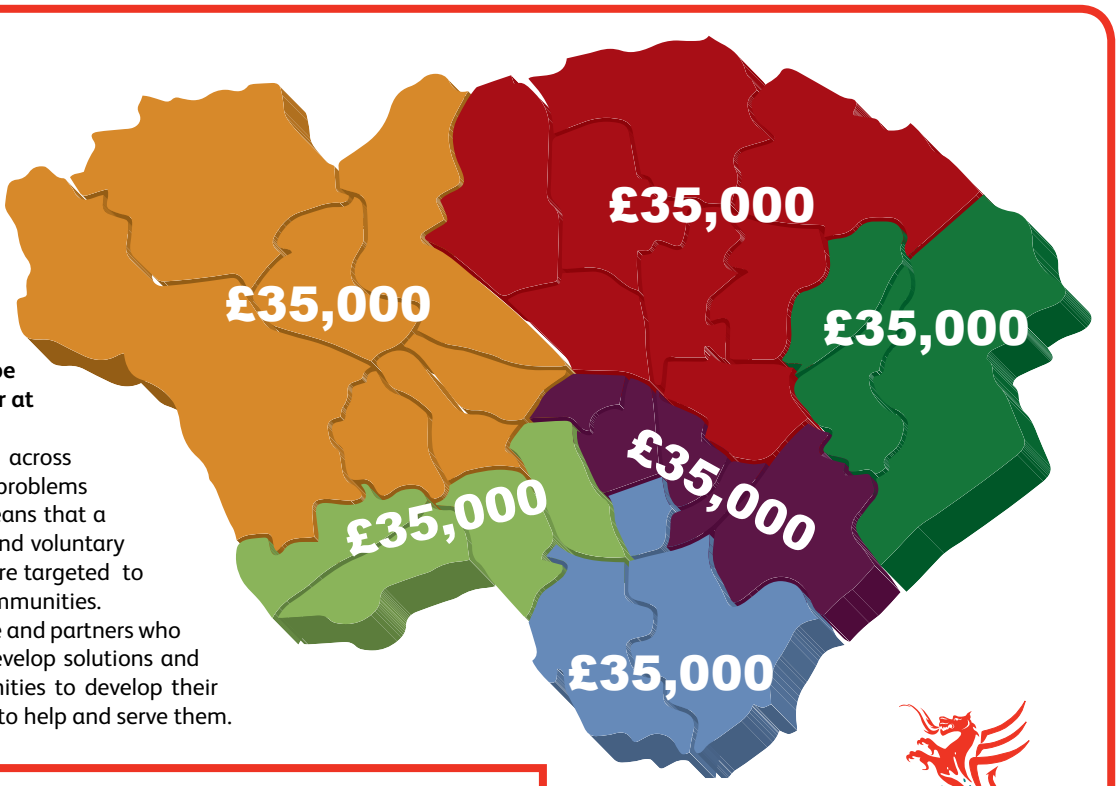
THE City of Cardiff Council is committed to putting the co-operative agenda at the heart of the way it works and earlier this year, joined the Co-operative Council Innovation Network.

The network consists of member councils across the UK including a number of "core cities" like Liverpool, Newcastle and Edinburgh, providing a platform for local authorities to share new ways of working and develop innovative ideas to tackling the tough issues of reducing budgets and greater pressure on services.

The Council intends to develop a series of projects and initiatives under the Co-operative Cardiff umbrella which will make a real difference to people's lives and be central to how we develop the organisation in the years ahead.

There are already a number of good examples of the co-operative approach taking place across the city and in this edition of Capital Times, we shine the spotlight on some of those.

Neighbourhood Partnerships



CARDIFF'S Neighbourhood Partnerships bring services closer to people, and help partners understand local needs and aspirations, allowing resources to be co-ordinated to solve problems and deliver at a local level

Multi-agency teams based in six areas across the city share local intelligence to solve problems for their particular neighbourhood. This means that a range of expertise from across the public and voluntary sectors is brought together and resources are targeted to focus on the issues that really matter to communities.

Neighbourhood Partnerships bring people and partners who deliver services together to discuss and develop solutions and providing a space for people and communities to develop their ideas with the organisations who are there to help and serve them.

Partnership Fund

THE City of Cardiff Council has created an annual fund for third sector, community groups and public sector organisations working in partnership to address local priorities in the six Neighbourhood Partnership areas in the city.

A total of £35,000 is available in each of the six areas and funding is awarded in the range of £250 to £2,500 although in exceptional circumstances, amounts up to a maximum of £5,000 may be considered. Projects need to be 'sponsored' by a local elected member from the ward in which the project will be delivered.

For example, following the first phase of funding, Old Illtydians RFC was successful in applying for £4,000 for a project to transform the Old Library in Splott into South Splott Sport and Community Hub.

For more information on the Neighbourhood Partnerships and the Neighbourhood Partnership Fund, visit www.cardiffpartnership.co.uk

ace Action in Caerau and Ely

ACTION in Caerau & Ely (ACE) is a community organisation with over 400 local members. The charity aims to bring the communities of Ely and Caerau together, to support community groups, manage and develop local projects and find ways of regenerating the area.

Since February 2013, ACE has been the host organisation delivering the Welsh Government's Communities First Programme in Cardiff West and South West.

Local people and community groups are now directly involved in designing and delivering the services provided through the Communities First Programme and it is an important example of how the City Council sees the future of service delivery.

The Council remains the Lead Delivery Body for the Communities First Programme, ensuring effective financial and performance management of the programme, but the responsibility for delivery sits with communities and local organisations like ACE.

ACE delivers over 25 projects, all of which are characterised by co-operative values. These projects are underpinned by 'Timeplace', a successful and widely celebrated Community Timebank scheme run with partners 'Spice'. Timeplace allows community members to receive Time Credits in return for time given to their community. One hour equals one credit, meaning everyone's time is valued equally. The Time Credits can in turn be used as currency to spend with participating organisations and to access services and events such as training, leisure services, theatre tickets and days out.

European football elite clash in Cardiff

THE superstars of Spanish football converge on the capital this month when the Football Association of Wales hosts the UEFA Super Cup at Cardiff City Stadium.

All eyes will be on hometown boy, Gareth Bale, as part of the UEFA Champions League-winning Real Madrid line-up as they take on UEFA Europa League winners Sevilla on Tuesday, August 12 (kick off - 7.45pm).

Hosting the match further bolsters Cardiff's status as an international sporting city with all the necessary infrastructure and expertise to deliver major events.

Thousands of Spanish football fans are expected in Cardiff to watch their teams battle it out in this showcase head-to-head and the capital is gearing up to make them feel at home with a three-day Spanish fiesta planned on The Hayes on August 10,11 and 12 featuring street entertainers and the chance to sample Spanish cuisine.

An activation zone will also be located on The Hayes from August 1 with footballing activities each weekend and additional music and entertainment from August 10 to 12. This includes the big screen showing archive football coverage, a grandstand, a kicking cage, football inflatables, demonstrations and workshops by freestyler footballers.

The UEFA Super Cup, UEFA Champions League and UEFA Europa League trophies will all be displayed at the activation zone on August 10 and 11 where fans will have the chance to see the European silverware and capture the moment on camera.

Cabinet Member for Community Development, Co-operatives and Social Enterprise, Councillor Peter Bradbury said: "We are very excited that Real Madrid will be taking on Sevilla in the newly-extended Cardiff City Stadium this month but the occasion will be all the more special given that a Cardiff boy who has stayed true to his roots, Gareth Bale, will be playing.

"Hosting this match is a real honour for the city, especially during our year as European Capital of Sport and is further proof of our global reputation as a world-class capital for sport, built on a history of successfully hosting major events.

"I'd like to extend a warm, Welsh welcome to all visitors coming to the city for the game and hope they enjoy the fantastic attractions Cardiff has to offer."

Gareth Bale said: "I am really looking forward to the Super Cup at the Cardiff City Stadium. I will be playing in my home city. It will be a fantastic occasion. I will be playing in front of all my family and friends.

"Cardiff and Wales has changed dramatically over the past few years. As a city Cardiff has staged several high profile and successful sporting events. And the Super Cup between Real Madrid and Sevilla will again showcase the Welsh capital."
